WAIKIKI.

Since the history of the Hawai-Provisional Government of the ian Islands has been pretty well ventilated of late, and nothing said of the beauties or minstrelsy of the country, the following lines from the pen of Rollin M. Daggett, of Nevada, who was United States Minister at Honolulu during President Arthur's time, will be of especial interest, now that there is a full in negotiations. The poem was first published in the Honolulu ADVERTISER in 1883, shortly after the Kalakaua coronation, and received the following complimentary notice from the editor of that paper : 'Amongst all the poesy which has been inspired by Hawaiian scenes or events, we have not met with anything to equal these pleasing lines. Indeed, for its music, its happy expression, and its truly bard-like thought, we must accord to this poem a high rank in the class of minstrelsy to which it belongs."

WAIKIKI. The cocoa, with its crest of spears. Stands sentry 'round the crescent shore,

And algaroba, (1) bent with years, Keeps watch beside the lanai (2) door. The cool winds fan the mango's cheek,

The mynah (3) flits from tree to tree, And zephyrs to the roses speak Their sweetest words at Waikiki. Like truant children of the deep Escaped behind a coral wall. The lisping wavelets laugh and leap, Nor heed old ocean's stern recall. All day they frolic with the sands,

Kiss pink-lipped shells in wanton glee, Make winrows with their patting hands,

And, singing, sleep at Waikiki. The closing curtain of the night Is shading down the gold to gray, And on the reef the flaring light Of brown-armed fisher (4), far away. Dyes red the waves that thunder by The sturdy bulwarks of the sea,

And, breaking into riplets, die Upon the breast of Waikiki. Now come wild echoes through the alr,
And shadow of a rugged face,
With iron limbs and shoulders bareThe chieftain of a dusky race (5); Whose hostile front, with lifted lance, And war-prows flecking all the sea, Swept through the palms with bold advance Along the shores of Walkiki. And all unchecked, in martial course, By menace or the spear of foe, The misty columns move in force,

Their chieftain leading as they go.
p, up! Nuuanu's rocky bed—
Till looking down, through clouds they see The beetling front of Diamond Head, And silver sands of Waikiki.

On! on! The foe has reached the And o'er the Pali's (6) awful side! With shout and stroke, and battle surge, Is poured a shricking human tide!

Then all is still—the work is done. And thus the shadows come to me, When twilight clouds, kissed by the sun. Have bronzed the shores of Waikiki. And then, with tropic murmurs blent,

Come distant voices, half divine, While mingled with the ylangylang's (7) scent Is breath of sage and mountain pine; And from Diablo's (8) vine-clad feet,

From desert bleak and green Mau-Are wafted strains to me as sweet As e'er were heard at Walkiki.

O, Waikiki! (9) O, scene of peace! O, home of beauty and of dreams! No haven in the isles of Greece Can chord the harp to sweeter themes: For Houris haunt the broad lanais, While scented zephyrs cool the lea,

And, looked down from sunset skies,

The angels smile on Waikiki. Algaroba— A species of locust, originally from Africa. The "Elga-rob" of the Arabs. A species of the same called the "Mesquit" in Cali-tomical and the "Mesquit" in California. 2. Lanai-A Hawaiian word for veranda; now applied to the spacious ver-anda parlors at Waikiki.

3. Mynab—An Aslatic bird introduced into the Hawaiian Islands about twelve years ago, and now thoroughly domesticated. 4. The Hawaiians fish by night by the light of torches whenever the weather is favorable. Kamehameha I., who, landing at Waikiki with his warriors, engaged the army of the chief then reigning over the Island of Oahu, drove and his forces up the valley of the Nuuanu, and finally over the preci-pice of the Pali, and so made himself master of the Island, as mentioned in the 6th stanza. Ylangylang— A Persian perfume resembling the delightful scent of fra-grant blossoms growing at Waikiki.

8. Mount Diablo, California.
9. Waikiki — Honolulu's favorite summer retreat and seaside resort. -[Am. Ex. For a lame back or for a pain in the side or chest, try saturating a piece of flannel with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and binding it onto the affected parts. This treatment will cure any ordinary case in one or two days. Palu Balm also cures rheumatism. 50
